I am a gregarious person and feel comfortable in all age and social groups. I am very proactive in researching solutions to any problem that may block my way to a positive outcome. My experience as a rugby player allows me to transfer some of my sport ethics to my professional life including determination, dynamism, conscientiousness and whilst I work well alone, I am a good team player. I am always trying to improve my skills and embrace learning new ones and feel I would fit perfectly in any innovative team.

WORK EXPERIENCE

April-May 2024: Marketing intern in a medical supply company.

During my internship at Brennan&Co, I engage in various activities. These include copywriting, optimizing the company's website for SEO, gathering client information using our new Salesforce CRM system, managing Google Ads for retargeting purposes, executing Mailchimp email campaigns to enhance client engagement, running LinkedIn ads, and analyzing reports through Google Analytics. It's a dynamic role that allows me to contribute across different areas!

July 2022-2023 : Activity Leader in summer camp

As a host, I participated in the creation of interactive games in order to captivate and occupy my audience. Then the second part of my role was to create and manage the vacation blog, write on it every day and upload vacation photos. Finally, the last part of my role was to set up a "chillout" space for children on the theme of surfing.

January 2023 : Intern in a clothes store

During my internship as a shop assistant I showed dynamic flair for customer engagement and product promotion. Proven ability to create enticing displays that drive sales. My excellent interpersonal skills coupled with my multilingual abilities helped increase sales and build customer relationships. As fashion is a love of mine I felt the need to provide personalised recommendations and enhance the overall shopping experience for the client.

June 2021: Volunteer at a second-hand textiles Pop Up

I am deeply passionate about waste reduction, so when I was offered a position at the innovative pop-up shop "Vente à Kilo" in Bordeaux for a weekend, I was thrilled. This unique shop specialized in selling vintage and second-hand clothes imported from Germany. Throughout my time there, I was involved in every aspect of the business, from managing inventory to assisting customers and explaining our distinctive purchasing approach: paying for clothes based on weight rather than individual pricing.

The team at "Vino Kilo" was incredibly knowledgeable, providing me with invaluable insights into the workings of this pioneering concept. Their guidance expanded my understanding and expertise in sustainable fashion and waste reduction practices

July 2020 : Organiser of a rugby event over three days

Unfortunately, during the COVID restrictions, my rugby team and I were prohibited from training or playing together. As a 16-year-old, this period posed significant mental and physical challenges. With the rugby season nearing its end and no actual play with the team, I took the initiative to plan a morale-boosting rugby weekend in anticipation of the restrictions lifting.

The preparation involved weekly efforts to transform a piece of land into a rugby pitch, complete with setting up posts and marking the lines. I went further by constructing an outdoor dry toilet and a solar shower. Additionally, I organised a simple three-day menu where everyone participated in the cooking and cleaning. When the rugby club learned of the event, they generously offered to cover the expenses for food and beverages. Each participant brought their own tents, bikes, and utensils to contribute to the occasion.

I take immense pride in the success of the three-day event. Every player attended and I ensured everyone was included in every part of the weekend, and it turned out to be an unforgettable experience for each individual. The event remains a cherished memory, often recalled with fondness, as it was a much-needed and deeply appreciated gathering for everyone involved.
